1.The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1 and 3-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kingston in view of Japanese Patent 9-114,406 for reasons of record.

2.Applicant's arguments filed April 3, 2006 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant notes that Kingston was made in 1947 and such would have made the production of the lens element described therein as different than that of the instant LCD. Such is not persuasive. Kingston shows a cooling conduit (19, 21 for lower and upper molds, respectively) and a heating (steam) conduit (20, 22) in the supports for the molds and the utilization of a "plurality of cooling pipes" for the lower mold would certainly have been obvious thereover. Ie, the use of a number of such pipes or conduits in lieu of only one would have been obvious. Likewise, it would have been obvious to have modified the heating and cooling pipes for both upper and lower dies shown in Kingston with the instant cooling arrangement for the lower mold and heating for the upper mold dependent on exact temperatures desired during the pressing. The age of a reference is not material to its use in a rejection. Also, bodily incorporation for structures such as cooling and heating means in molds or their supports is clearly not the test for obviousness, but rather would such have been obviously used by one of ordinary skill in the art. The disclosure of Kingston provides the answer for this. Applicant has pointed to the abstract of Japanese —406 to show further evidence of non-obviousness. Such is not persuasive since the abstract is vague as to what precisely is being disclosed. One of ordinary skill in the art would realize that the pressing of plastic preforms is aided using heat and that cooling is traditionally used to shorten the cycle time of the pressing.

3.THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
